HOME FOR THE HOLIDAYS

Familiar carols echo off the walls of ballrooms that have welcomed guests for more than 100 years. Children laugh while chewing on freshly baked chocolate chip cookies, trying to muster the courage to sit on Santa's lap to relay their wish list. Mom and Dad sip hot chocolate by a cozy fire, gazing in wonderment at the glowing lights adorning freshly cut fir trees. During the holiday season, there's nothing quite like coming home to The Greenbrier.

Nov. 15, 2019 through Jan. 2, 2020, America's Resort™ celebrates Home for the Holidays, an annual celebration that includes entertainment, activities, food and elaborate decorations to mark the holiday season and embody the excitement of those childhood memories we all hold so dear.

"Whether it's your first visit or a yearly holiday tradition, we welcome all to come Home for the Holidays," said Dr. Jill Justice, President of The Greenbrier. "All of our guests are family, and we would be thrilled to have our holiday traditions become yours."

More than 100 Christmas trees are exquisitely adorned throughout the property, along with more than 2,000 poinsettias. In the Lower Lobby, the annual chocolate display is created out of 1,000 pounds of delectable chocolate, and more than 120,000 lights adorn trees, bushes, doors and tables throughout the 11,000-acre estate.

Special events are held to celebrate each specific holiday during the season. Thanksgiving includes the annual Golden Feather Fetch Scavenger Hunt, a 5K run, a Thanksgiving Day Feast, the Gobbler Gala Dinner Party and much more. Christmas features the 5K Reindeer Run, the Jingle Bell Parade and the Gingerbread Ball, while New Year's Eve is the day for the Resolution Run, Soiree '20, The Casino Club Party, Kids "Neon New Year" Party and the Midnight Madness party for teens.

But the fun and excitement isn't limited to the holidays themselves. Tree lighting ceremonies are held each Saturday from Thanksgiving through Christmas, bringing guests and visitors together on the front lawn around the giant tree. A perennial favorite for families, the celebration includes caroling, hot chocolate and a visit from Santa Claus, who lights up The Greenbrier on his command.

The first three weekends in December will be Weekends with Santa, complete with fireside stories with cookies and milk and breakfast with the jolly old elf himself. December 13 and 14 will be a unique Woodford Reserve Weekend. The luxury whiskey weekend features both a Woodford Reserve whiskey tasting and a whiskey-paired dinner.

Looking for fun on your own? No problem. With more than 55 indoor and outdoor activities, there's something for everyone at The Greenbrier. In addition to the popular year-round activities – such as off-road driving, bunker tours, indoor swimming and the gun club – unique wintertime offerings help your family embrace the season. From sleigh rides around the property to ice skating on the outdoor rink, savoring homemade peppermint ice cream at Draper's, sipping hot chocolate by an indoor or outdoor fire, taking in the beauty of the twinkling lights with a Jeep-pulled Trolley Tour of the property or watching holiday movies in the theatre, The Greenbrier helps fill every heart with the spirit of the season.

THANKSGIVING

Thanksgiving at The Greenbrier is the perfect combination of family, food and fun. From scavenger hunts to fun runs – and of course mouthwatering feasts your family will be talking about for years to come – America’s Resort™ provides a cornucopia of activities to create a holiday to remember.

On Thursday, November 28, Thanksgiving weekend begins with the Turkey Tail Fun Run, which starts at the North Entrance at 8:00am, and features an enjoyable run throughout the picturesque property. With the exercise out of the way, it’s time for some nourishment, and the Thanksgiving Day Feast provides that and more, as The Greenbrier’s culinary brigade serves up a brunch that features traditional holiday fare and other southern favorites inside Colonial Hall. A non-denominational service in the beautiful Greenbrier Chapel is held from 11:00am until noon, and afternoon activities include a Family Dining Etiquette class, a slideshow presentation on the history of The Greenbrier, a musical cabaret and an indoor planetarium.

On Friday, Nov. 29, The Greenbrier will host various workshops focused on painting, balloon making, truffles and more. The 19th Annual Golden Feather Scavenger Hunt will begin in Chesapeake Hall at 2:00pm. A benefit for area food banks, the hunt throughout the 11,000 acres of The Greenbrier is fun for both children and adults and is a great opportunity to explore and learn more about the historic property. A “Cocktails for the Feast” mixology class is held at 5:00pm that same day. The Greenbrier’s team of mixologists help guests craft two legendary cocktails to celebrate the season.

The Gobbler Gala Dinner Party and Dance from 6:00pm until 9:00pm in Colonial Hall brings the evening to a conclusion. The festive and scrumptious buffet feast for the entire family includes lively music, caricature artist and balloon artist. The extensive menu includes all of the holiday favorites, including dessert.

End the weekend by getting in the Christmas spirit with the first Saturday Tree Lighting of the season. On November 30 at 6:00pm, hot chocolate and caroling help welcome Santa Claus to The Greenbrier, and Saint Nick lights up the giant tree on the Front Lawn on his command. Families can also get a jump start on Christmas cards, as photos with Santa are available in the Upper Lobby on Saturday and Sunday from noon until 2:00pm, and on Saturday from 5:00pm until 6:00pm, a Christmas Musical will be held in The Greenbrier Chapel.

THE DREAM TREE

The Dream Tree for Kids began in 2011 from an idea that the Justice Family created to provide toys for children across the state who otherwise may not have anything beneath the tree on Christmas morning. Eight years later, The Greenbrier's amazing Christmas charity drive is still going strong.

So, what exactly does it take to distribute $1 million worth of toys to families in need every Christmas? Let's just say the process starts long before lights begin going up on trees.

The first step is ordering the toys. You don't just run out to your local shopping center and purchase thousands of baby dolls or science kits. It takes planning, cooperation and a lot of space to get the toys ready each winter.

Ordering the toys is the job of Amanda Falls, a retail buyer at The Greenbrier, who begins the process in early August. While most are making one last trip to the beach or trying to squeeze in as many rounds of golf as possible, Falls is speaking with several different toy reps – those she works with throughout the year, ordering toys for The Greenbrier's toy store, Fizzy's Land of Oz – and giving them guidelines on the types of toys she is seeking and the requirements to fit this project. For example, they have to be in a box and easy to wrap. Falls looks for a variety of toys to fit all ages and genders, from infants to 15-year-olds.

The companies put together booklets of available options fitting those descriptions, and send them to Falls, who then selects the toys and quantities she wants.

There are some negotiations involved, as well. Falls works with the companies to get the best prices, assuring that as many toys as possible can be purchased with the available money, and some of the companies are willing to go above and beyond, feeling the value of the project.

In 2018, Falls placed orders with 30 different companies to fill all the Dream Tree gift needs, and those toys began arriving at The Greenbrier in October, trickling in all the way up until the distribution date.

But Falls' job is just one piece of a larger puzzle. Once the toys arrive, they must be wrapped and sorted, and that assignment goes to a team of 570 volunteers who worked for a total of 1,206 hours over 19 days and went through 47 giant rolls of wrapping paper in 2018 to ensure that the toys were wrapped, sorted in the proper spot and ready for distribution.

Nearly 4,000 gifts were placed in and around the Dream Tree for Kids display in the Upper Lobby of The Greenbrier – only a fraction of the total gifts – and the rest were housed in the Tennis Center and Golf Clubhouse to await distribution.

Where do those gifts ultimately land? Nonprofit organizations around the region sign up each year to be part of the Dream Tree for Kids project. Registration forms are posted online on The Greenbrier website, and organizations have until September to complete the form, explaining their organization's purpose and requesting the number of toys and age groups needed.

Shortly after the deadline, organizations are notified via email of the number of gifts they have been selected to receive.

As part of the process, organizations also have to volunteer to help complete the orders. For every 100 presents requested, each organization is asked to donate an hour of volunteer time to help prepare the presents for distribution. Beginning November 1st all the way through distribution day, the Tennis Center is filled with the sounds of Christmas music, wrapping paper and laughter as volunteers ready the gifts for delivery. Under the direction of Holly Gillespie, who spearheads the Dream Tree project, relying heavily on the assistance of Alyssa Hill, every toy ends up in the correct location to be handed out to the correct organization on distribution day.

In late November, organizations are notified of a pickup time and location, and in early December the gifts are all distributed in one day, as organizations send trucks, vans and trailers to pick up the wrapped or unwrapped gifts – organizations have a choice on the registration form – and take them back to their ultimate destination.

In 2018, thousands upon thousands of gifts were distributed to 122 organizations from Kentucky, Ohio, Virginia and West Virginia. More than 800 of those toys were purchased by visitors to The Greenbrier and donated to the cause, while the rest came directly from the Justice Family, which supports this unbelievable initiative year after year.

As the toys go out the doors and into the trucks, the smiles on the faces of The Greenbrier Team Members who volunteer to assist with the distribution are always every bit as wide as those on the faces of the children who will open the packages this Christmas.

FRONT AND NORTH ENTRANCE CHRISTMAS TREES

If you've been to The Greenbrier anytime during the holiday season, you've probably seen the towering tree at the center of the iconic front entrance, decorated with thousands of glowing lights and standing proudly against the backdrop of America's Resort. But have you ever thought about how that grand evergreen gets to that spot?

The process is much more involved than driving to a tree lot and slapping a spruce in the back of a pickup. The journey actually begins months, and sometimes years, before the holiday season as The Greenbrier Director of Grounds, Curtis Webb, scours the landscape for the perfect tree.

"It's all riding and looking," said Webb. "All year long, wherever I'm going, I'm looking. I basically see them, knock on the door and if nobody is home, I leave a business card with a note with what I'm asking about."

Sometimes convincing the owner is easier than others. Webb said it has taken gift certificates, donated work, donations to different causes and plenty of talking over the years to convince owners to part with trees.

Other times, owners are just happy to have the trees removed. The Greenbrier grounds crew always takes the time to clean and repair the area where the tree stood, and it often saves property owners time and money to have The Greenbrier team get rid of a tree that would eventually have to be removed anyway.

"I look at the shape first," said Webb of the process of scouting the appropriate tree. "Sometimes they will lean, but we can use our stand and guy-wires to straighten them up."

The tree for the 2018 holiday festivities came from the property of a former Team Member at The Greenbrier. Bruce Dolin worked at America's Resort for 32 years before his retirement, and the tree that caught Webb's eye stood on Dolin's property off Route 92, just a few miles from The Greenbrier.

"I've seen it often," said Webb. "This was probably the third or fourth year in a row I've stopped and asked, and I've always been told no."

The scenario was the same in 2018, until Dolin called Webb on his way back to town and told him he had changed his mind. The tree, he said, was starting to lean, and it made more sense for The Greenbrier crew to take it out of the ground than for Dolin to pay someone else to do the job.

On the morning of Nov. 14, 2018, The Greenbrier's head arborist, John Lewis, and another member of the grounds crew, Eli Loudermilk, left the grounds shop around 7:30 a.m., and headed to Dolin's property to retrieve the tree.

First, the tree had to be prepared. Lewis worked on pulling out a grape vine that had grown through the branches and around the trunk of the tree, while Loudermilk went to work on cutting off the lower limbs that wouldn't be needed.

When all was prepared, Lewis shimmied up the tree like a black bear – a job he's been performing for years – to install a lifting strap. With the strap in place, the two waited for the rest of the team to arrive to complete the process.

Meanwhile, other members of the grounds crew went to work on the Front Entrance, preparing the site for the tree's arrival. Three feet of soil covering the stand cover had to be removed and the cover opened. Then, guy-wires and turnbuckles were attached to anchors at the site. Eventually, they would be used to stabilize and straighten the tree in the stand.

At about 9:30 a.m., help arrived at Dolin's property. L.D. Hanna & Son Excavating came with a red Mack truck to haul the tree back to The Greenbrier, and Beckley Crane & Construction provided the crane to lift the tree from the site and onto the truck.

When both vehicles were in place, Lewis climbed back up his tree to attach the crane's hook to the lifting strap.

With the hook secured and Lewis out of the tree, Loudermilk grabbed his trusty chainsaw once again and began sawing through the trunk. When the trunk was sawed all the way through, the crane lifted the 64-foot Norway

"This was probably the third or fourth year in a row I've stopped and asked, and I've always been told no."

spruce, which had been planted as a foot-high sapling in 1973, over a trailer that sat between the tree and the truck, and onto the truck.

The tree was secured to the bed, and the truck took off through town, bound for The Greenbrier while the grounds crew cleaned up the mess left behind.

The job, though, was only half complete.

The next step was to lift the tree back off the truck and put it in its spot in the front circle. That job was again assigned to Beckley Crane & Construction, and as the grounds crew gestured directions, the crane lifted the tree high into the air, before slowly lowering it toward the stand.

Lewis and Loudermilk were again waiting at the base of the tree to put the trunk perfectly into place, and the 4,800-pound tree was soon upright and standing majestically against the backdrop of The Greenbrier.

Webb and his team then connected the guy-wires and maneuvered the tree perfectly into place, before turning the job over to The Greenbrier's electricians to decorate the spruce for the holidays. Using a bucket truck, the electricians covered the tree with 8,460 lights, and the job was complete.

The tree at the front isn't the only one that's annually decorated for Christmas at The Greenbrier. Last year, there was also a 46-foot, 4,000-pound Spruce at the North Entrance that was adorned with 6,850 lights. That tree came from the property of Larry Wade in White Sulphur Springs.

This year, there are new trees with new stories, but their beauty and the smiles they bring to the visitors that see them will remain unchanged.

for an evening filled with live music, family photographs, caricaturists and balloon artists, as well as a visit from the guests of honor, Santa Claus and Mrs. Claus. An extensive Dinner Buffet assures you're not tucked into bed with an empty stomach, and your visions of sugarplums will be replaced by the exceptional desserts you just enjoyed. The traditional Yule Log Ceremony in the Upper Lobby brings the festive evening to a close at 9:30pm.

Christmas Day begins with "The Candy Cane Capers" puppet show at 10:00am, followed by a worship service in The Greenbrier Chapel. This non-denominational Christmas service begins at 11:00am.

The afternoon is highlighted by indoor planetarium presentations and performances by the West Virginia Brass Quintet. Later that evening, a Christmas Cantata provides entertainment inside the picturesque chapel at 5:00pm, and the celebration ends with hot chocolate and cookies in the Upper Lobby at 8:30pm.

THE TRUGOLF INDOOR GOLF SIMULATOR

Working on your golf game or enjoying a competitive match with your group doesn't have to wait until spring. The Greenbrier has golfing options all year long, even when the weather outside isn't ideal for a trip around the historic fairways.

Open November 18 through the end of March, the TruGolf Indoor Simulator provides the perfect opportunity for instruction or entertainment. With virtual simulations of more than 85 golf courses and 36 modes of play, the simulator gives friends and colleagues a chance to fulfill the need for competition and camaraderie, with a match just like one they would play on The Old White TPC or The Meadows. With food and drink available for purchase and various modes of game play outside of a traditional round, the simulator can also provide a different style of entertainment for a recreational golfer that can't be found on the course.

"Whether you want to play a round at Pebble Beach or compete in an arcade-style game with targets and points, our TruGolf Simulator has you covered," said The Greenbrier Director of Golf Instruction, Billy Winters, who runs the simulator during the winter. "The graphics are amazing, and the simulator is incredibly accurate and realistic. Our guests often make an outing of it with friends, food and drink, and the experience is one to remember."

For the serious golfer determined to keep his or her game in shape, the TruGolf Simulator is also an incredible teaching tool. The TruTrack analyzer provides precise feedback about where the golfer is hitting the ball, how hard it is being hit and other information about ball flight and club head positioning that will help improve every facet of the swing. These tools, paired with the knowledge and experience from Winters, who was named the top instructor in West Virginia by Golf Digest for 2017-18, make for a unique lesson that will get your game in shape for the spring and summer.

"The data that the system provides is incredible," said Winters. "It gives immediate feedback on the swing that helps me make suggestions for improvement."

Simulator rental rates start at $50 per hour for a single player, up to $120 per hour for four players. Private lessons are $150 per hour for adults and $85 per hour for juniors. To schedule your lesson or simulator experience, call 304-661-3563 or email billy_winters@greenbrier.com.

SPORTSBOOK

Since opening in September 2018, the FanDuel Sportsbook inside The Casino Club at The Greenbrier has become a popular gathering for fans of all sports. With comfortable chairs and couches, 21 large televisions and food and beverage options, it's the perfect place to take in a college football Saturday or an evening full of NBA basketball. With television coverage of virtually every sport, it's also a great spot to watch tennis, soccer or boxing that might be a little more difficult to find on a home television.

With access limited to overnight guests, Golf and Tennis Club members and members of The Greenbrier Sporting Club, the FanDuel Sportsbook provides a unique experience inside America's only private casino with sports wagering opportunities you won't find anywhere else.

The new West Virginia FanDuel Sportsbook app, available for download via iOS or Android provides another sports gaming option outside of the casino walls.

Wagers can be made on the app anywhere inside West Virginia's borders, and it offers industry-leading promotions, a range of payment and withdraw options and 24/7 customer service.

"The atmosphere inside the FanDuel Sportsbook location at The Greenbrier can't be beat, but we're thrilled that friends of The Greenbrier now have an option for sports wagering when they're not on property," said Dr. Jill Justice, President, The Greenbrier. "A tremendous amount of planning went into making sure the experience on the app was a great one for the users, and we have heard excellent feedback since the app launched in September."

Plan a visit to the FanDuel Sportsbook during your visit to America's Resort, and be sure to download the app. To learn more, visit fanduel.com/sportsbook-wv
